Executive Order 010

Merging the Bureau of Prisons with the United States Marshals Service

Section 1. Purpose

The Bureau of Prisons and the U.S. Marshal Service perform similar roles in the Justice System, including the detention, transportation, and monitoring of inmates in the federal prison.

In the effort of consolidating the federal government for a more realistic government, the Bureau of Prisons shall be merged with the U.S. Marshal Service. As part of this transition, the U.S. Marshal Service will assume all the responsibilities vested under the Bureau of Prisons, while maintaining its existing responsibilities.

Section 2. Responsibilities

(a) The U.S. Marshals Service will inherit the following responsibilities previously vested in the Bureau of Prison:

- a. D.C. Washington Federal Prison:
  - i. The U.S. Marshals shall guarantee the safety and security of the Federal Prison and any other prison under the Federal Government against any threat, and shall manage the clearance system of the Prison.
- b. Inmate Safety
  - i. Any inmate in the Federal Prison shall be protected by the U.S. Marshal Service to ensure their treatment and safety remains a top priority.
- c. Escapee(s)
  - i. The Security of the Prison shall be maintained as to no inmate may escape and shall be prevented by the Marshals, and any attack to free an inmate shall be stopped by the Marshal Service as to maintain the Prison's safety. This responsibility was already delegated to the Marshal Service, but now shall be enhanced as to allow previous correctional officers to track down and apprehend any escapee.

d. Rehabilitation & Community Service

- i. The U.S. Marshals shall be allowed to assume any duties previously vested in the bureau as to rehabilitate inmates, including any program that the U.S. Marshal shall establish.

e. Existing Responsibilities

- i. The U.S. Marshals shall continue to perform its established duties, including the serving of summonses and other legal documents, the serving of warrants, the protection of judicial officers, and the order of decorum in the courtrooms during its proceedings.

Section 3. Structure

The U.S. Marshal Service shall establish a new structure as to house the new correctional members from the Bureau of Prisons, and to retain the previous responsibility in the Bureau, and the administrative position shall include a Principal Deputy Director of the U.S. Marshal Service.

Section 4. Transfer

Transfer of personnel from the Bureau to the Marshal Service shall be coordinated by both agency administration, members previously serving in the Bureau of Prison shall be transferred to a similar role, and additional roles may be created to accommodate to the influx of new agents.

With the expanded scope of the U.S. Marshal Service, the Prison Chief shall oversee the review and transfer of any related documents and resources to the Marshal Service and shall revise them to accommodate the U.S. Marshal Service.
